WASHINGTON, Aug. 26.—(UP)—President Roosevelt was advised tonight that 4,120,000 workers were re-employed, industrial pay rolls increased $36,000,000 weekly and business failures reduced 40 per cent during the nation's first year under the "New Deal."

These data were submitted to the chief executive by Donald R. Richberg, secretary of the executive council, in the first of a series of reports summarizing objectives and accomplishments of the national program of economic recovery and reconstruction.

The report was purely factual and contained no interpretation other than the figures presented. "Impressive evidence of the volume of unemployment to be relieved," Richberg said he expected to have completed by August 29 another report covering relief of agricultural distress.

Analyses will be made public of the operation of all recovery agencies periodically from now on until November. They will show the nation's progress from the economic morass in which it was bogged when Mr. Roosevelt took office, and will be used by democratic congressional candidates to combat republican attacks upon the "New Deal."

The first report was confined to relief of industrial unemployment through private enterprise and through public works. Relief of destitution, relief of financial pressures upon the individual and corporation, advance in public services, administrative services and promotion of foreign trade will be explored in subsequent reports.

Richberg credited the NRA with a "dominant influence" in industrial advances noted in the report tonight, but said the exact contribution of this

Y. W. C. A. Secretary Loses Car to Bandits

Atlanta's ride-robert bandits Sunday night claimed as their victim Miss Clara Nolen, general secretary of the Y. W. C. A.

Miss Nolen reported to police that while putting her new automobile in the garage at the rear of her apartment at 705 Piedmont avenue at about 8:30 o'clock Sunday night, two young white men, dressed in white clothing and bare-headed, walked up on either side of her car. One of them held a pistol on her while the other climbed beneath the steering wheel and drove the car out onto Piedmont avenue, across Ponce de Leon avenue and half-way to North avenue. There he stopped the car, took Miss Nolen's pocketbook which contained about $1 in change and personal effects, and commanded her to get out.

The bandits, whom she described as being about 18 years old, drove off in her new car while she rushed to the telephone to report the robbery and kidnapping to police.

Pitcher Breaks His Arm Throwing Fancy Curve

Young baseball pitchers frequently throw their arms out, but few go to the extremes indulged in Sunday afternoon by J. O. Roberts Jr., 21, of 1142 Arlington avenue, S. W. while throwing a curve.

Roberts told Grady hospital attendants that he had strained some muscles in his arm, or may even have dislocated his arm while pitching. The attendants ran educated fingers over Roberts' pitching arm and whisked him off to the X-ray room where it was disclosed that he had completely fractured his pitching arm. He was admitted to hospital after the break was reset and won't pitch any more this season unless he uses his other arm, as his hurling "wing" will be in a sling for the remainder of this season, Grady doctors promised.

TALMADGE, FOES FACE BUSY WEEK OF CAMPAIGNING

Governor to Make Three Addresses; Delivers Radio Speech Over Hook- up Here Tuesday Night.

Georgia's 1934 gubernatorial campaign today enters its next to the final week, a week in which Governor Eugene Talmadge will make three addresses, more than he has delivered during any week in the campaign.

The chief executive will speak at 7 o'clock Tuesday night over a statewide radio hook-up through station WSB. The speech will be the first he has broadcast since his opening address at Bainbridge on July 4.

Following his radio address the governor will make his first appearance through south Georgia, speaking Thursday at Waycross and Friday night at Savannah. After the Savannah speech he will go to his Tallahassee, Fla., campaign headquarters.

Convenience to Public

"There is no place in Atlanta big enough to hold the crowd which would want to hear the governor here," Mr. Talmadge said Sunday. "We have arranged the radio speech so that all who care to hear the governor may listen and not be pushed and shoved around in a great crowd such as would be the case if Mr. Talmadge spoke at the city auditorium or the baseball park."

The county club president said that the various district and ward organizations would have separate meetings in their communities at which

Run Over by Auto, Boy, 5, Near Death

Five-year-old James Moore, son of Mrs. J. A. Moore, of Atlanta R. F. D. No. 3, was in a precarious condition at Grady hospital Sunday night with both legs fractured and a probable fracture of the skull. He was struck Sunday afternoon at Flat Shoals avenue and Grady county road, employee of an ice company at 543 Flat Shoals avenue.

Weatherford reported to DeKalb police over the telephone that the child dashed out in front of his automobile and that though he applied his brakes, he was unable to keep from striking the boy. DeKalb county police will investigate the accident.

HITLER SEES HOPE FOR PEACEFUL END TO SAAR QUARREL

Fuehrer Tells 300,000 That Germany Will Regain Area But Hopes France Will Accept Gracefully.

COBLENZ, Aug. 26.—(UP)—Adolf Hitler today strongly denied that his Nazi regime was departing from Christianity, as opposition leaders have charged.

"We have only separated politics and religion, the reichsfuehrer explained in an address urging return of the Saar to Germany. "There has been and will be no interference in religious teachings—under the stipulation that religion does not meddle in politics."

"Our work certainly is not one which is unblest by God."

EHRENBREITSTEIN, Germany.

Aug. 26.—(AP)—Chancellor Adolf Hitler, in an emotional address to a throng officially estimated at 300,000 today asked the world and especially France to be prepared for the return of the Saar to Germany when that rich region votes on the question next January.

"The Saar is the greatest problem now separating France from us," Hitler said.

"We shall not give up the conviction that the other side eventually will view this problem as it really is, and that France will not deny her assistance in solving it."

"There is no reason whatever why two great nations should remain forever hostile on this issue."

The throng, apparently almost to a man, seemed intensely Nazi in its sympathies.

Understanding Asked.

The address was a strong appeal for understanding abroad, especially on the part of France, that the return of the Saar to the reich next January 13 was inevitable. Ties of blood and race, he said, bind the Saar population indissolubly to the fatherland.

Reviewing the past 18 months of the Nazi administration the Fuehrer took full credit for the diminution in unemployment throughout Germany.

ROOSEVELT RESTS AT FAMILY HOME

President to Keep in Touch With Capital Dur- ing Hyde Park Stay.

HYDE PARK, N. Y., Aug. 26.—(AP)—President Roosevelt today established himself in the family home overlooking the Hudson river here for an indefinite stay while he pursues the recovery campaign with specially invited lieutenants.

Arriving at the home town early this morning, the president smiled in happy response to the quiet welcome of the folks at the station. Mrs. Roosevelt met him there and accompanied him to the family residence for breakfast.

The president's mother, just home from a trip abroad, met him on the steps of the home.

Apparently satisfied after a busy two weeks in the White House with the national organization for carrying on the recovery efforts, Mr. Roosevelt spent the day alone with the family and arranged for an auto trip tomorrow about old places, including the West Point Military Academy.

A White House staff accompanied him northward with a secretary, Marvin H. McIntyre, and an executive office was set up tonight in a nearby Poughkeepsie where contact was maintained with the White House. Mr. Roosevelt in all probability will remain here three or four weeks. The White House executive office is undergoing reconstruction and accommodations in Washington are somewhat discommodious.

Tomorrow's motor trip will include a picnic luncheon along the way. The route leads by Wallkill and Warwick to West Point. State institutions are located at the former places and these will be inspected.

The president will leave Hyde Park early in the morning and the trip will require almost a full day. The official calling list for the presidential stay here is taking shape slowly. Mr. Roosevelt told secretaries he wanted to confine callers to the business of the national recovery drive.

The president also was welcomed here today by his son, Elliott, and Mrs. Elliott Roosevelt and their young daughter. The special train ride from Washington was without incident. Departure from the capital was made shortly after 11 o'clock.

Father and Cult Return Boy; Will Submit to Medical Aid

Alabama Child With Dangerously Infected Leg Brought Home When Officers Promise Not To Prosecute.

FORT PAYNE, Ala., Aug. 26.—(AP)—An eight-year-old boy who had been spirited from his home here by members of a religious cult to prevent medical treatment for an infected leg was returned to his home by his father.

The return of the boy, Wallace Doyle Sharp Jr., was effected following an agreement between Sheriff S. W. Pope and the boy's father that he would not attempt to provide medical care for the child.

Sheriff Pope announced that medical treatment would be given by a Fort Payne physician and that if the physician thought it necessary the child would be taken tomorrow to a Good Samaritan hospital.

Dr. R. J. Guest, who examined the boy before he was spirited away, said the child's leg had become infected following a bruise and that it was swollen to almost twice its natural size.

Dr. Guest said that when he suggested the child be taken to a hospital he was told by members of the cult that "the Lord's taking care of him, we don't need no doctor."

Sheriff Pope said the members of the cult were trying to cure the boy through prayer.

Officer Rufus Smith, who brought the father and child here at 9 o'clock tonight, said the boy's leg still was badly swollen but that he seemed to be resting fairly well. The officer said the boy had not been given medical attention since leaving his home here.

Smith said the boy was taken away by his father, Homer Elrod, and James Miller, Holiness preacher, Friday, while officers were en route to the home to attempt to provide medical treatment.

The officer found the boy at the home of a Mr. Williams, at Dutton, about 35 miles from here in an adjoining county. The boy's grandmother, Mrs. Charles Sharp, returned with the party here.

The return of the boy followed a search of South and Lookout mountains today by Circuit Judge A. E. Hawkins, Mayor Charles W. T. Sawyer and County Solicitor J. M. Presley.

Probate Judge G. L. Malone had issued a warrant against the father but Sheriff Pope said the charge would not be pressed if the boy's condition improves all right.

Judge Hawkins, who said he viewed the boy during his illness, said the leg was swollen almost twice its natural size and "was sickeningly black."

U. S. AIR MINISTRY P.O. CLERK JAILED IN THEFT OF MAIL

Head of Aviation Com- mission Predicts Unit Similar to Britain's.

LONDON, Aug. 26.—(UP)—Possibility of organizing an air ministry in the United States government along lines similar to the British air administration was indicated by Clark Howell, head of President Roosevelt's air board, in an exclusive interview today.

Howell made his prediction prior to a two-day vigil by federal postal inspectors was climaxed, early Sunday with the arrest of Julius Smith, 41, of 492 Langhorne street, S. W., a postal clerk in the new postoffice building.

Smith had commanded the attention of the inspectors when letters addressed to several Atlanta firms and containing money were never delivered. Discovery of the opened letters in mail boxes increased the activities of the inspectors who discovered that the letters were intercepted on a particular shift and that only certain clerks would pass the mail boxes after leaving the postoffice.

Last week a policeman saw a mail clerk throw seven letters behind a drug store and upon recovering the letters found that all had been opened. Four were empty and three contained government money orders.

Smith's morning Saturday while he was sorting mail, it was said. Saturday night test letters were prepared and the inspectors took their places. Allowing time for the test letter to go through the proper channels and arrive at Smith's distributing rack, the inspectors sprung the trap. They arrested the clerk and the test letters were found in his possession.

He will appear before the United States commissioner at 10 o'clock this morning to answer to charges of theft of letters from the mail.

One Killed, 12 Hurt In Greek Farm Riot

ATHENS, Aug. 26.—(AP)—One person was killed and a dozen were injured as police suppressed a riot of farmers at Aigion in the Peloponnese today.

A mob, incensed because the price of black currants has been dropping, invaded official buildings, burned documents and set off explosives.

Hitler a Religion, Not a Man, Declares Dorothy Thompson

PARIS, Aug. 26.—(AP)—Dorothy Thompson, American newspaper and magazine writer who was "invited" to leave Germany, arrived here today, and in a spirited description of her adventure said, "Chancellor Hitler is no longer a man, he is a religion."

Miss Thompson, in private life Mrs. Sinclair Lewis, wife of the novelist, was asked by the secret police at Berlin yesterday to leave the country immediately. Presumably an article she wrote three years ago, when Hitler was still striving to become "der Fuehrer" gave offense to the Nazis.

SCHACHT PREDICTS GERMAN DEFAULT IN FULL ON DEBTS

Complete Collapse Cer- tain Unless Further Concessions Are Made by Creditors, He Says.

BERLIN, Aug. 26.—(UP)—Complete collapse of Germany's foreign debt payments, involving thousands of these funds when he had predicted by Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, economic "dictator" of the reich, unless some further concessions are made by her creditors.

Addressing journalists at the Leipzig Fair, Dr. Schacht said:

"Under the policy as pursued at present, collapse of Germany's foreign debts is an absolute certainty."

The number of checks and (total payments by states as of August 16): Alabama, 130,403; Arkansas, 95,482; California, 2,092; Georgia, 104,973; Louisiana, 56,446; Missouri, 10,330; New York, 1,367; North Carolina, 67,228; Oklahoma, 81,201; Pennsylvania, 84,139; South Carolina, 10,330; Tennessee, 36,595; Texas, 3,322; Virginia, 3,322; West Virginia, 3,322.

Dr. Schacht denied that the government was seeking any new credits, adding: "We don't want any credit which is not given willingly and voluntarily."

BAR GROUP FLAYS FEDERAL AGENCIES

NRA and AAA Draw Criticism for Under- mining Judiciary Powers.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Aug. 26.—(AP) Charging the "judicial branch of the federal government is being rapidly and seriously undermined," a report of the committee on administrative law today indicated leading government agencies will be closely scrutinized at this week's annual convention of the American Bar Association.

The report, made public in advance of its submission to the convention, criticized NRA, AAA and others of the administrative agencies functioning within the federal government as tending to remove large fields of legal controversy from jurisdiction of the courts.

These agencies were defined as those to which congress has delegated judicial or legislative powers and included various agencies created by presidential order.

Advantages Recognized.

Advantages of such agencies also were recognized in the report, especially the employment of experts supervising subject matter requiring specialized experience and training.

The principal one, the report set forth, was in the exercise of legislative functions, including formation of rules and regulations by the bodies of experts, rather than in their judicial functions.

Advising that the judicial functions of these agencies be divorced from the legislative or executive and placed in a federal administrative or independent tribunals modeled after the board of tax appeals, the board said "it is not going too far to state that the judicial branch of the federal government is being rapidly and seriously undermined."

Basic Lines Lost.

Apprehension was expressed that agencies combining all three functions "are obliterated essential lines of our government structure . . . and subjecting agencies in Washington are handicapped and concluded "it becomes hopeless for the average citizen."

Pointing out that under Title I of the NRA alone 13 agencies and four corporations have already been created by executive order, the report said lawyers even in close contact with these agencies in Washington are handicapped and concluded "it becomes hopeless for the average citizen."

Byrd Slowly Winning Way Back to Health

LITTLE AMERICA, ANTARCTICA, Aug. 25.—(Delayed)—(AP)—(Via Mackay Radio)—Dr. Thomas C. Poulter reported today that Admiral Richard E. Byrd was making slow daily progress toward complete recovery of his health, impaired by illness during his four months of isolation at Bolling advance weather base.

When Dr. Poulter's tractor party reached the advance base a fortnight ago, Admiral Byrd, having been without conversation so long, did all his talking in shouts. But recently, Dr. Poulter said, he has unconsciously readjusted his voice to its normal softness.

The last two days at the advance base have brought daily minimum temperatures of 75 degrees below zero, the party reported by radio.

Auto Kills Two Men Walking on Highway

WAYCROSS, Ga., Aug. 26.—(AP) Two men walking along a highway were killed last night by an automobile.

They were Otis McInevale, 24, and his nephew, Hugh Hudgens, 22. The driver of the car reported the accident to the sheriff's office.

Hudgens was knocked through a fence and his body was not discovered until several hours after that of McInevale had been brought here. No charge was placed against the driver.

Mrs. Thomas, her mother, Mrs. Jessie Thomas, and a friend, Bill Jenkins, all of Gainesville, Fla., were on their way to Chicago and wanted to reach Chattanooga by noon, she told hospital attendants. She said the automobile was not traveling very fast but she was unprepared for the bounce which threw her against the top of the car. She said she hit on her back on the armrest on the rear seat.

300,000 WORKERS IN SILK AND RAYON MAY PARTICIPATE

Walkout Is Delayed to Date Beyond September 1 Deadline in Order to Give More Time For Perfecting Plans.

ATTACK CENTERS ON 'STRETCH-OUT'

Jobs Fewer, Work Harder, Pay Less Under NRA, Union Says While Oper- ators Claim Opposite.

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.) WASHINGTON, Aug. 26.—(AP)—Secret instructions for a general walkout in the cotton textile industry on September 4 have been sent to sectional chairmen by the national strike committee of the United Textile Workers.

The order, which will be announced officially this week, will affect nearly 500,000 cotton mill workers, union officials say. An additional 300,000, they add, may participate with the order from the mills in the silk, rayon and woolen industries.

The date for the walkout, jealously guarded by the strike committee, headed by Francis J. Gorman, was set for September 4 to give the union time to complete details for the strike, the largest numerically to confront the administration with the exception of the general strike in San Francisco.

Ordered for First.

The strike committee was ordered by a recent convention to call the general strike "on or before September 1."

The deadline falls on a Saturday, when few mills are in operation. The following Monday, Labor Day, is a holiday and the strike strategists settled upon September 4 as the day upon which they hope to achieve complete stoppage of cotton mill operations.

Posters proclaiming the strike hour are under lock and key in the offices of regional leaders, to be released on receipt of formal announcement from strike headquarters here.

Bolstered by votes of confidence at regional meetings in Charlotte and Shelby, N. C., Providence, R. I., and Worcester, Mass., the strike committee pressed ahead today with plans for the walkout.

Gorman Sees Success.

"I am fully convinced," Gorman told reporters, "that the strike not only will materialize but will be successful."

He declined, however, to say what date had been fixed for the strike, but in a letter to President William

Judge Humphries, in Sermon, Expresses Confidence in Youth

The proper home background pervaded by a Christian spirit, coupled with the adequately fulfilled mission of the churches, are the two things which will bring back the prodigal sons and daughters of today. This is the message which was given by Judge John D. Humphries, of Fulton superior court, who delivered a lay sermon at Woodlawn Presbyterian church, in Grove Park Sunday night, in the absence of the pastor, the Rev. Harold C. Smith.

Judge Humphries expressed confidence in the good intentions of the young people of today, and likened their motives in straying from the narrow path to the yearnings of the prodigal son of the parable, who wanted his substance too quickly. He urged parents to strive to make the home influence so strong that although youth may err and wander away, the cords of Christian influence will draw them back into the fold, as they did in the case of the prodigal son.

The salutary results of probationary sentences was dwelt upon as an ever-present aid in bringing about rehabilitation. Judge Humphries related a number of instances where such sentences had brought about permanent good behavior, and complimented the work of J. M. McElroy, probation officer, who is a prominent member of the Woodlawn church.

Judge Humphries, in a prayer for those who are suffering financial and physical difficulties in the present times of economic strife, urged that they endeavor to live within the spirit, with a consciousness that they are blessed in honest living rather than cursed with the stigma of ill-gotten gain.

He closed his address with a plea to the church to "go out and gather in these prodigal sons and daughters and bring them back into the fold of the Master," declaring that it is the church's special mission to reclaim the wandering souls.

"And to that end," he concluded, "I commend the spirit of the parable of the prodigal son, which is the essence of the Christian spirit."

DOROTHY THOMPSON DISCUSSES OUSTER

German Correspondents Feel They Are Peeping Through Keyhole, She Says.

Note: Dorothy Thompson, wife of Sinclair Lewis and noted foreign correspondent, was "requested" to leave Germany because of a "sland" on Chancellor Hitler in an article she wrote, discusses here her experience.

By DOROTHY THOMPSON.

(Copyright, 1934, for The Constitution and North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.)

PARIS, Aug. 26. (AP)—(By Cable)—This is the first time I ever have been expelled from a country and it gives me a strange feeling, particularly because that country is Germany.

I went to Germany first in 1920, directly after the war, when everything was in a state of terrific disorganization, and, in the following years, spent much time there until, in 1924, I went to live in Berlin as correspondent and head of the central European bureau for the New York Evening Post and the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

The first time I was expelled from Germany was in 1933, when the animosity engendered by the war had not yet died down, and, in all the former allied countries, whoever wrote about Germany had to overcome very strong resistance. I believe that in my unimportant way, I helped somewhat to overcome that resistance. At any rate, the German foreign office believed so, and, when I married and left Berlin in 1928, I had many expressions of friendship and gratitude from officials of the German republic.

I thought of them sadly as my train pulled out, carrying me only a few miles from Berlin. Some of those officials still are in the service of the German government, some of them are emigres, and some of them are dead.

My colleagues, with many of whom I have covered stories in various parts of Europe, all came down to see me off and made such a demonstration of friendship and affection that the sleeping car conductor evidently thought I was a very important personage. I never have had such considerate treatment on a train. I had a second-class sleeper, and should have shared it with another passenger, but the conductor, after conferring with another official, tenderly removed me to a compartment all my own, and so graciously brought me mineral water.

At the border, no one looked at my luggage and it was only as I crossed into France that a French customs official, opening my luggage and discovering numerous copies of the Voelkische Beobachter and the Angriff, which are leading newspapers, looked at me suspiciously. Perhaps he thought I was a Nazi agent.

The difficulty for a journalist in being expelled from a country is that the public is almost certain to think that it will influence his or her point of view. I suppose that now, if I report anything good about Nazi Germany, it will be thought that I am taking a personal revenge. As a matter of fact, this is not a very important incident in a dramatic revolutionary development.

Revolutions usually are not very clever about handling outside publicity. Mr. Goebbels, for instance, who seems to be very effective at home in getting his own countrymen to believe what he says, and, without comment, has a very different proposition to meet with the foreign correspondents, who still live in a world where there is more than one opinion about most things and who have an irritating habit of trying to get as many facts as possible, even when those facts do not prove any thesis. He also faces a stubborn resistance to anything that calls itself a propaganda ministry.

The average English or American newspaperman unconsciously stiffens his back when he is given a hand-out, and he starts out by thinking there must be something fishy about it. In his long experience of publicity handouts, there usually has been. If he then starts to investigate, to question, to point out discrepancies, and, for that, is treated as an enemy, he cannot get over the suspicion that there is something rotten in Denmark.

Lauds Stresemann Regime.
Germany had its best press outside the country in the day when the treatment of foreign correspondents was most free and most cordial—under the Stresemann regime. In those days, there was a conference every Friday in the foreign office, usually attended by the chancellor or the foreign minister and by all the foreign correspondents, where questions were freely asked and answers were freely given—sometimes in confidence, sometimes for publication. Criticism, even the most hostile, was received in dignified silence or openly discussed. But the foreign correspondent in Germany today feels he is peeping through a keyhole at the proceedings of a secret society or that he is being led by the nose.

As far as I can see, I really was put out of Germany for the crime of blasphemy. The fact that the crime was committed before Mr. Hitler became chancellor does not matter. After all, you can cut a man's head off in Germany today for something that was not a capital offense when it was committed.

My offense was to think that Hitler is just an ordinary man, after all. That is a crime against the reigning cult in Germany, which says that Mr. Hitler is a messiah sent of God to save the German people—an old Jewish idea. To question this mystic mission is so heinous that, if you are a German, you can be sent to jail. I, fortunately, am an American, so I merely was sent to Paris. Worse things can happen to one.

Nude Death Seeker Leaps Into Yellowjacket Swarm

TAMPA, Aug. 26. (AP)—Poisonous stings of scores of hornets today killed Ramon Perez, 34, unemployed Tampa cigar maker, who leaped nude into a colony of the insects with the avowed intention of killing himself, hospital attendants reported.

Perez died tonight after suffering agonizing pain from the stings since noon.

Perez was in the swarm of hornets for almost ten minutes, it is believed. He went from his home to an adjoining vacant lot, removed his clothing and sat down in the midst of the swarming insects.

While someone called the fire department, Perez's mother, Mrs. C. Perez, rushed to the aid of her son. He refused to heed her appeal to flee. Finally, after firemen had begun burning weeds in order to smoke out the hornets, she dragged him from the lot.

HITLER A RELIGION, SAYS MRS. LEWIS

ican news writer asked to leave Germany since Chancellor Hitler came to power. The "invitation" to her to leave, she said in Berlin yesterday, was extended "by a pleasant young man in civilian clothes."

The propaganda ministry hastened to announce that it is a mistake to say she was "expelled" from Germany, adding, "she was only advised to leave."

There was no more official clarification of the government's feeling in the matter, or its motives.

But Miss Thompson said she was told that if she did not leave at once police officers would escort her to the border. Through the American consul she asked for permission to remain 24 hours to attend to pressing matters. The permission was extended, but then Miss Thompson found she would not need more time and she started for Paris Saturday night, apparently under surveillance.

Miss Thompson had been in Germany only a week.

The American consul was informed by the secret police that the order for me to leave was based chiefly upon an interview with Hitler which I had in 1931, and which was a personal impression of personality," Miss Thompson said in a statement.

NAZI BITTERLY ASSAILED IN BOOK LAST SPRING

NEW YORK, Aug. 26. (UP)—There is a general persecution in Germany of all individuals," Dorothy Thompson, American correspondent who was expelled yesterday from Nazi Germany, wrote last spring in a book called "Nazism: An Assault on Civilization."

Miss Thompson wrote the first chapter under the heading "The Record of Persecution." Others who contributed were Alfred E. Smith, John Haynes Holmes, Stephen S. Wise, Ludwig Lewisohn, William Green and Charles H. Tuttle.

"Every man, woman and child in Germany," said Miss Thompson, "has been deprived of something, and of something which, until March, 1933, the beliefs and experiences of the civilized world had taught to be good."

"It is impossible," she wrote, "even to guess how many of the thousands who have been clapped into prisons and concentration camps, or subjected to grueling torture at the hands of storm troops, have merely been guilty of doubting the infallibility of the leader."

"The terror," she has not stopped in Germany. Its actual extent is not known. A few months ago, several reliable foreign correspondents agreed together that this could be made a conservative statement: "Scores have died, and perhaps hundreds, hundreds, and perhaps thousands have been physically tortured; tens of thousands have been imprisoned; sixty thousand have been exiled."

"There remains all the rest of the 60,000,000 Germans who must accept the imprisonment of their minds and souls."

U. S. NOT TO ISSUE PROTEST UNLESS REQUEST IS MADE

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26. (AP)—State department officials indicated today no protest against the German government's "invitation" to Dorothy Thompson to leave the country would be made unless she requested it.

Such matters, they said, would be handled by United States representatives abroad.

The state department's policy was described as one of "non-interference" with foreign governments' opinions of what Americans should be allowed to remain in those countries.

Several years ago, it was recalled, the Paris embassy relayed a protest to the Quai d'Orsay against the expulsion of an American correspondent who had published a secret draft treaty between Great Britain and France. The expulsion order, however, was not withdrawn.

many and the elimination of class antagonisms.

He ridiculed scathing foreign allegations that Germany is not a happy nation and that trouble is brewing in the Reich.

"What pains us most," he said, "is the injustice and unfairness of others. Nothing is ever to be had for nothing. We must fight for everything—and we shall."

Will Fight.
"The greater the difficulties, the harder we shall fight. One thing is certain—we shall not capitulate."

Hitler then said that if forced to do so, Germany can stand on her own feet economically.

Making an emotional appeal directly to the residents of the Saar, Hitler asserted:

"The happiest moment of my life shall be the moment 800,000 people of the Saar land will be welcomed back with open arms into the home fold, without regard to beliefs and convictions."

"Be of good cheer. The whole German nation is behind you. When the bells ring January 1 heralding the joyful event may they also ring in happier times for two nations which once faced each other as enemies."

BOY IS RETURNED BY CULT, FATHER

Adding "the boy must be in awful pain," Dr. Guest agreed to the plan, saying the infection naturally caused a high fever and needed "immediate action."

Judge Hawkins said the father was liable to criminal prosecution, and that he and the rest of the abduction group "could be charged with manslaughter" if the child died. He would not comment further, however.

"Everybody's pretty excited and looking out for any clues, but I don't think there'll be any great big poses organized or any violence if we find the child soon," said the jurist.

New Law Rapped.
The commercial law and bankruptcy committee expressed doubt that recently enacted bankruptcy legislation will accomplish a swift and radical reduction of the overhanging debt structure of the country.

The committee reported the provision for relief of debtors act, the agricultural compositions and extensions act and the act for the reorganization of railroads engaged in interstate commerce have been in operation more than a year and asserted no significant relief in debt discharges has been achieved.

Father Saves Child, Collapses and Drowns

MIAMI, Fla., Aug. 26.—(P)—Exhausted from pulling his daughter, Hazel, 14, to shallow water after she spent her strength while attempting to swim across a rock pit, Fred Gidolf, about 55, collapsed and drowned today as his family and a party of friends looked on helplessly.

The accident occurred at Longview, three miles southwest of Homestead. Gidolf, a Homestead plumber, had been teaching his daughter to swim. She started to stroke her way across to an opposite bank, but became exhausted. Gidolf succeeded in dragging her to shallow water, gave her one last shove toward shore as his strength left him and then sank. The body was rescued.

TWO SHOT TO DEATH IN KENTUCKY BATTLE

PIKEVILLE, Ky., Aug. 26.—(P)—A roadhouse on the Pikeville-Williamson highway at Toler, Ky., 27 miles northeast of Pikeville, was the scene of a gun battle early today in which Joe Fleming, 27, an employee there, and Stallard Dye, 28-year-old Pikeville mechanic, were shot to death. Investigating officers were unable to learn the cause of the shooting. The two men, said by acquaintances to have been good friends, had planned to go to Pikeville together. Reports of the shooting here said that Fleming, struck by six bullets, fell dead and Dye, hit three times, died a few minutes later. Witnesses were unable to say which of the two started firing first.

Parent and Child

"Life in College" is the title of a splendid book by Christian Gans, dean of Princeton College. It aims "to introduce the undergraduate upon the American campus to himself, to his friends, and more particularly to his parents back home." Some chapter titles are "Should Your Son Go to College?", "The Freshman and His Father," "Crabbed Age and Youthful Spenders," "Why Students Fail," "This New World and the Undergraduate," "The Revolt of the Sophomore," "Romance in College," "Some Mistakes of Fathers," "Trouble at Home—Disturbance in College," "The Code of the Undergraduate."

He proposes some questions for parents: Have you a fair idea as to how your son stands in comparison to other boys, physically and mentally? Can you get along with your child's other parent? Are you self-indulgent? Are you overindulgent to your child? Can you trust any schoolmaster? Can you trust your son? Can you get along with your son's friends? Is your home really a home or is it a "hush house" or hospital? Do you have any hobbies with your son? What bad habits have you? (to be answered by the other parent). Do you frequently suspect your son of being dishonest? Do you believe your son is a genius? What books of education have you read?

Dean Hawkes in his book, "College—What's the Use?" comments on students who earn their way. To quote: "As a matter of fact, no boy ought to be compelled to earn his tuition way if it can in any way be avoided. Not only does he get a mighty poor living by the process, but a mighty poor education as well. If the boy ought to go to college at all, he ought to be trusted to make good use of a reasonable contribution from his parents toward his expenses. Any parent owes this much to his boy. Any boy can earn part of his expenses without hurting himself, and in my experience, any boys are willing to earn more than their share in order to save the burden on their parents. But to see boys by the dozens take jobs lasting from 6 o'clock in the evening till 2 in the morning, six days in the week; to see boys undergoing transfusion of blood to get money for food and books, is a heart-rending spectacle."

I happen to have had some experience in this direction, always a "tired horse" while in college, and finishing with a heavy back on my back. I'm not sure it was worth the price. If I had it to do over I believe I would have dropped out a year or two and gone back. But suppose I then had not returned—a question youth must face.

I should like to hear from my readers about some of these matters. I am sure the editor of this paper would be glad to print some of your discussions, particularly the accounts of some who have earned part or all their way at college. If youth only knew they could find an excellent outlet for expression, opportunities to learn to write effectively, and stimulation in critical thinking through frequent correspondence with the editor of the daily paper they read.

REPORT MEASURES NATION'S STRIDES UNDER NEW DEAL

recovery agency could not be established statistically. "Direct effects of NRA in stabilizing business operations, in improving the total purchasing power by providing increased employment without reduction in compensation and in the increase of prices from loss levels, demonstrate the dominant influence of the NRA in this industrial advance," the report stated.

Three Industries Saved. Codification by the NRA, the report continued, has saved three of the country's greatest industries: bituminous coal, oil, and automobile. As signs of business recovery, the report listed:

An increase in labor's share of national income from 58.3 per cent in June, 1933, to 62.5 per cent in June, 1934.

Total wages in manufacturing industries increased from $96,000,000 a week in June, 1933, to $132,000,000 weekly in June, 1934.

Reduction of six hours in the average work week.

Average hourly earnings have been increased 26 per cent. The index of production of all manufacturers rose from a low of 47.4 in March, 1933, to 72.1 in May, 1934, since which time there has been a recession.

Business failures from February to May, 1934, were more than 40 per cent lower than in 1933.

The index of corporation profits rose from the deficit figure of 6.9 in the first quarter in 1933 to the profit figure of 33.2 in the second quarter of 1934.

Purchasing Power Rises. The report estimated that despite the increased cost of living there has been a 25 per cent increase in the total purchasing power of manufacturing wage earners. The average per capita weekly earnings, however, increased only 8.5 per cent, leaving the average manufacturing worker's purchasing power practically unchanged.

Oil Industry. Considerable space was devoted in the report to the petroleum industry. Before establishment of the petroleum code, it was stated, surplus production and destructive competition had driven the price of petroleum as low as 10 cents a barrel.

Under the government program the price of oil has been restored to $1.00 a barrel, the report stated. Although compliance with wage and hour provisions of the code is reported on the whole fairly satisfactory, Richberg said the opposition of some of the major oil companies to conceding the right of collective bargaining is developing the menace of labor disturbances.

Turning to the first of President Roosevelt's gigantic reclamation projects, the report found the Tennessee Valley Authority making a real contribution to the relief of industrial unemployment not only through employment of workers but through improving working and living conditions throughout the Tennessee valley.

It was estimated that 10,000 had been provided direct employment through the TVA and additional thousands had been given work indirectly. The authority is reported ready to provide gradual employment for 10,000 additional workers as soon as funds are made available for expansion of the construction program.

Public Works. Turning to the relief granted through public works, the report stated that total appropriations amounting to $3,700,000,000 have been allotted as follows: Federal projects, $1,578,000,000; non-federal projects, $970,000,000; relief highways, $700,000,000; TVA, $500,000,000; Emergency Housing Corporation, $128,000,000; non-construction projects, $332,000,000.

This total of $3,665,000,000 leaves an unallocated balance of approximately $38,000,000. In refuting charges that political preferences had been shown in PWA loans, the report stated 90 per cent of all contracts in the United States have at least one PWA project.

Employment was given to 250,000 workers directly on PWA sites throughout the winter and since has increased in number to embrace 675,000 men. In September 700,000 are expected to be at work on PWA projects when a seasonal decline is expected to reduce the level of employment to about 300,000 men through-out December, January and February.

Public Works Administrator Harold Ickes has recommended various changes in the act authorizing the public works program, the report said, and has proposed federal legislation which will prolong the existence of the PWA and its power to make loans for at least two years longer. The administration is scheduled to pass out of existence in June 16, 1935.

The report stated that through the national re-employment service and state employment services a total of 1,403,358 workers were placed on public works projects from July, 1933, through June, 1934.

TALMADGE, FOES FACE BUSY WEEK OF CAMPAIGNING

the governor's address would be brought to the members by radio.

Opponents Active. While the governor is making his three big speeches, his two opponents also will be active during the week. Judge Claude C. Pittman, of Carterville, will begin his week's activities today with a speech at Sylvestor this morning, another at Ashburn this afternoon and the third of the day at Waycross tonight. Alderman Ed A. Gilliam, of Atlanta, will speak this morning at Jonesboro and tonight at Griffin.

Mr. Gilliam will make 10 other speeches this week, as follows: Tuesday morning, 11 o'clock, Zebulon; Tuesday afternoon, 3 o'clock, Thomaston; Wednesday morning, 11 o'clock, Butler; Wednesday afternoon, 3 o'clock, Ellaville; Thursday morning, 11 o'clock, Oglethorpe; Thursday afternoon, 3 o'clock, Fort Valley; Friday morning, 11 o'clock, Forsyth; Friday afternoon, 3 o'clock, Barnesville; Saturday morning, 11 o'clock, Jackson; Saturday afternoon, 3 o'clock, McDonough.

He delivered last week 11 scheduled speeches and three unscheduled speeches, the latter being at Trion, Wednesday night; Manchester, Saturday morning, and Franklin, Saturday afternoon, all of the unscheduled.

Talmadge headquarters Sunday made public an editorial appearing in the Citizens' News, of Atlanta, in which the governor was highly praised for his labor stand and members of the executive committee of the Georgia Federation were scored for attacking the governor.

In the editorial, W. W. Mathews, publisher of the paper, declared that Governor Talmadge would get a large majority of the labor vote.

Editorial on Talmadge. The editorial, titled "Labor Votes and Labor Leaders," follows:

"The gubernatorial campaign moves forward. One by one the charges and claims against Governor Talmadge, laboriously fabricated by his political opponents, collapse and crumble.

"It seems that desperate men will stop at nothing, but when they stoop to nonsense, their facility becomes so apparent that even the casual observer can see through their trickery. And trickery is often a boomerang."

"It is being heralded far and near that 'organized labor' has repudiated the governor. In this connection let us call attention to the fact that it was once widely heralded that 'an Irish saint swam the English channel with his head in his mouth.' Believe either story that you wish."

"A few machine elected—or self-appointed labor leaders, calling themselves an 'executive council,' no more make the labor vote than one swallow makes the summer."

"The rank and file of organized labor represent the finest type of home-loving, God-fearing, child-raising, taxpaying people."

"To believe that they will desert the first governor in many years who stands for them for their ideals for the security and protection of their homes and their welfare, is to believe that men can gather grapes from thorns and thistles."

"These self-appointed 'labor leaders' do not always have the interest of their membership at heart. They do not always have the interest of the plain people, or the masses, or the farmers at heart. In this particular case they have one thing, and one thing only at heart: their personal gain—their own aggrandizement. And they, for their own ends, barter to first one political group and then another, what they represent to be the votes of the people they are supposed to represent. Oh! Brutus! Oh! Iscariot!"

"Governor Talmadge is the best friend the just plain man—and that includes all working union men—has had in Georgia in 30 years. Watch the ballots and see!"

HITLER'S CHIEF PERILS.

Unsolved problems of currency, credit, wages, prices and food conditions threaten that may spell the overthrow of Hitlerism, despite the present stranglehold of the Nazis on Germany, in the opinion of Robert Crozier Long, presented in an article in Current History magazine.

This writer holds that the "inconsistent and romantic" policies of the Nazi government which have ruined German credit and upset the economic system built by the German republic are exemplified by the manner in which the Hitler cabinet has handled the problem of foreign trade. He cites that while negotiating commercial treaties and compensation agreements with European states, the present German government has at the same time made these agreements ineffective by means of duties and prohibitions of imports.

The first result of the effort at economic self-sufficiency, it is pointed out, has been the rise in prices described as basic to all the other economic troubles in Germany. These high prices have "impeded German imports, prevented the payment of the foreign debts and depleted the already scanty Reichsbank reserves."

Mr. Long stresses the part being played in the development of domestic opinion by the—

Rise in the cost of living, accompanied by any rise in wages. The rise in the cost of living is being severely felt by the urban working class, while the farmers, with a heavy reduction of crops because of the drought in Germany, offset by only an insignificant advance in grain prices, are beginning to feel the pinch. It is this question of prices that is the most vulnerable side of the Nazi regime. But the economic crisis has only begun. Not until the issue of this crisis is determined will we know whether Hitler by his bloody purge of June 30 permanently prevented a new revolution or counter-revolution.

The article in Current History was written before the plebiscite which put supreme power in Hitler's hands, but the facts presented undoubtedly explain to a degree the two-fold increase in opposition votes in the nine months since the election of last November.

Despite his seizure of unlimited power, the "fuhrer" is evidently sitting upon a volcano of unrest, arising from many sources of discontent. He has attained his present position by the ruthless application of power. What the future holds depends on whether he can retain it by the same method, or whether he will prove wise enough to solve the problems with which he is faced. The one thing that appears certain is that his future path will be even more difficult to traverse than the road by which he climbed to supreme authority.

MAN'S SPAN OF LIFE.

The average span of human life will be extended 30 years if medical science can be as successful in controlling diseases from which adults suffer as it has been in dealing with children's diseases, according to Professor S. M. McCay, of the New York State College of Agriculture. He points out that the child born in 1800 could expect to live an average of 32 years, while the American baby today faces a life of approximately 60 years.

In discussing the possibility of extending the average age to 90 years, Mr. McCay stresses that this must be attempted by efforts to increase the years of usefulness rather than by increasing the period of senility, pointing out that "nothing is gained by extending the period of pain, disease and falling senses in either animals or men; no one wants to keep a cow after she ceases to produce milk, but most people will agree that extension of the active productive lives of either men or domestic animals is desirable."

Such an increase in the life of the average man or woman would revolutionize living conditions in the world. Men who now at 60 are nearing the retirement stage, would still be in their prime, with a normal expectancy of at least a quarter of a century of continued active endeavor.

It would mean that men and women would still be mentally and physically alert after the broadening effect of many years of experience. The longer life span would preserve to the world for many years great intellects which now begin to deteriorate when the age of three score and ten is reached. Man's period of greatest mental productivity, now from 50 to 70, would be more than doubled.

Such a lengthening of life would automatically increase the population of the world by 50 per cent, families would be enlarged and the position occupied by youth radically changed in its relative importance.

Medical science has as yet met with little or no success in the effort to prolong the age of man. While the average life of human beings has been increased from below 50 to approximately 60 years, there has been no material increase in those living beyond 70.

So while Professor McCay's suggestion is an interesting one, leading to visions of widely different conditions surrounding life in the home and in the world of business, the lengthening of the Biblical three score and ten years as man's span of life is not yet in sight. Scientists still search for the Fountain of Youth but so far they have been no more successful than Ponce de Leon.

CLERICS FOR NEW CALENDAR.

An interesting summary of opinion on calendar reform expressed by more than 1,000 clergies, representing every Protestant church in the United States has been made public by the World Calendar Association, of New York.

This association favors the readjustment of the present calendar on a basis that would give the first month in each quarter 31 days and the second and third months 30 days, each quarter consisting of 13 weeks or 91 days, of which 13 are Sundays and 78 weekdays. This would leave an odd day which would be placed as an extra Saturday between December 30 and January 1. On leap years the extra day would be an extra Saturday between June 30 and July 1.

Each of the first four months would start on Sunday, on Wednesday during the next four months and on Friday during the final four months.

The calendar association points out that under this rearrangement of the 12-month calendar "comparisons are easily obtained; changes involved require a minimum of adjustment; expenses are not increased for business and the consumer; religious and secular holidays are stabilized, and the transition from the old to the new order is made easy by the retention of the 12-month year."

The questionnaire sent to American clergies dealt particularly with the proposed stabilization of religious dates. Of the 1,478 replies received, 907 were in favor of calendar reform and 131 against, while 1,037 expressed approval of the proposal of a fixed Easter, with only 92 against.

Typical of the comments of leading American clergies are those of Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, former head of the federal council of churches, who writes, "As a churchman I shall do what I can to induce the church to lead in calendar reform," and Bishop Manning, of New York, who takes the position that "a fixed Easter and a reformed calendar are greatly to be desired for many reasons and the churches throughout Christendom should take the lead in this matter."

While the more than a thousand clergies participating in this poll favored the reformed 12-month calendar by a vote of approximately 9 to 1, they rejected by 7 to 1 the suggested 13-month calendar favored by some calendar-reform advocates.

The expressions by these American clergies emphasize the extent to which the public is being won over to the cause of calendar reform. Undoubtedly there is now a general realization that the present calendar is obsolete and out of line with modern conditions.

THE WORLD'S WINDOW

Tattoo in Budapest.

"Aren't you ashamed to walk around naked?" asked a gent, who emerged from an evil-looking little shop in one of the slum quarters of Budapest where I strolled the other day to see how the other half of humanity lives.

"Naked?" I said, looking at my coat and vest, etc., "naked, what do you mean?"

"Whoever is not tattooed," he replied, "is naked."

"Well," I said, "you often talked of having a little tattoo mark on something or other engraved on our epidermis in the old days when we lived in holes in the ground. Some fellows argued that it would be a convenient identification mark, you know what I mean. But I couldn't see it. I'd feel like a marked man."

"Come inside," he said, "and let me talk to you. You see," he began, after we were seated, "I do real tattoo work, lasting work. I mean, my work lasts beyond death. What is your profession?"

"I am a commercial traveler," I said.

"Well," he said, "seeing that you are a commercial traveler, I can assure you that I have designs here which will give expression to everything virile and noble contained in the masculine body. I have political designs, erotic designs, esthetics, and what do you like?"

"You might show me some of your designs," I said.

He did. I could not make up my mind. "Why not a battle scene?" he asked.

"With Napoleon in the foreground, for instance," I said.

"No," he said, "I'll fix you. Where do you want it, on the back or on the front?"

"What's the use of a battle picture on my back when I always wear a shirt?"

"Do you never take your shirt off?" he asked.

"Sure," I said, "sometimes."

"Well, then, get that design put on. It will astonish your friends."

"My friends are not easily astonished," I protested.

"Say, listen, buddy," he said, "I'll put on something that will make them gasp!" Then he outlined a design to me, which I am sorry, for reasons of decorum, I cannot mention here.

Immigrants.

At one of the railway stations I saw a crowd of Hungarian peasants and learned that they were on their way to America. I got into conversation with one and he told me he had served in the Austro-Hungarian army and who therefore spoke German. He told me how his relatives had written him to come to America as quickly as possible as a real boom-time was going to break in the U. S. A. And then I heard the story of his preparations for the journey. Having placed his name and the names of the members of his family on the quota list several years ago, he has now sold his house and small farm. One of his boys was not going to the viium for the month was filled and the family had been notified to wait a full month in Budapest. This they had done.

"There did you stay all the time, seeing that you have no money?" I asked.

"We slept under the bridge," he replied.

"What did you eat?"

"Bread," he said, "my wife baked enough bread before we left home to keep us going for a month."

"You carry all that bread with you?" He showed me a basket full.

"Where are you going in America?"

"To Wisconsin." He told me that he had checks for $25 for each member of his family to stay in the immigration authorities at New York, that he was not going to become a charge on public charity. "I'll use that money for the railway fare to Wisconsin."

"What are you afraid of?"

"Is the journey to France and the waits in Paris and in the harbor. I think I'll be hungry before we start for America."

News Behind the News

By Paul Mallon.

BUSINESS

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26.—If anyone asks you how business has been during the last 60 days, don't tell him.

Just say that a difficult summer has been made much more difficult by the unforeseen drought and strikes and that a September improvement is now at hand. The extent of the improvement is impossible to estimate accurately and much depends on how much money the government is going to spend.

The balanced monthly business chart shows the existing situation April clearly. Industrial production fell off 7 points more than seasonal in July and is off probably 2 points more in August. Employment declined only half as much as production, but wages fell almost the full measure of the blow.

The manufacturers apparently are spreading the smaller amount of work on a part-time basis to ease the effect of the decline on employment. But there is also evidence of a little wage cutting on the side, although you cannot say exactly where.

CHART Our midsummer decline, therefore, appears to be about 12 to 14 per cent more than seasonal. All lines, except production, are generally at the level of this time last year (before the NRA became effective).

The figures in the chart are adjusted for seasonal variations. They represent the percentage of normal at the times stated, all items, except prices, based on a normal of 100 computed from the average years 1923, '24 and '25.

The chart follows:

BACKGROUND What knocked down the industrial production figure most was steel. It has been operating at about 24 per cent of capacity lately. That is because it did most of its mid-summer business before July 1, when increased prices went into effect.

Textiles also lagged under a 25 per cent curtailment agreement, which expired August 25. The inside word is that stocks of finished cotton goods are still unusually high and that the textile manufacturers do not care particularly whether the threatened strike comes off September 1 or not.

Lumber has been just so-so, but automobiles are holding up remarkably well. The automobile line is better off today than any other, except possibly tobacco. The automobile price cuts certainly stopped the buyers' strike in that industry. The maneuver was so successful that most insiders believe the manufacturers will lop a few more gadgets off their cars next year and maintain existing low prices, if they do not lower them further.

PRICES The increase of the wholesale price index was entirely due to the drought.

Prices of manufactured goods have actually decreased lately, but the increases in farm and food prices offset this decrease in the general index.

You can get a better slant on that situation by analyzing the weekly figures for the last 10 weeks (the drought period). In that time, farm prices have gone up 13 1/2 per cent and food prices rose 9.6 per cent. All other prices went down 3 1/2 per cent.

That shows that the farmer will be able to make what money he has (and gets from the government) go further in the purchase of manufactured goods this year, if there is any consolation in that.

HOUSING The new housing set-up has not had a chance to get started. There is some question about when and whether it will get started. It has been receiving unusually good publicity, but a private check-up of half a dozen major banks in New York showed that just exactly 31 applications for renovation loans had been made to them up to a few days ago. They have had no chance to look into each one, but they suspect probably half of the applications would be worth looking into.

That is a pointed hint of how much can be expected of the housing program this year.

BUILDING The figures on building suggest that the PWA flood of billions is again trickling off to an eye-dropper flow.

Building contracts filed in July amounted to about $120,000,000, of which $31,000,000 represented direct public works. This shows a horizontal decline from June, when $51,000,000 of public works contracts were awarded out of a total of $127,000,000. That forecasts a sharp contraction of public works activity in the fall, when road building also will decline.

The private building industry has, however, shown some remote signs of life. In July, 56 per cent of the building was financed by private funds. There was a rather striking, but small, spurt in factory building. Nearly $26,000,000 of the contracts filed were in that class.

The sharp increase was due to new buildings proposed in the chemical and textiles lines and is hardly important enough to signify a trend.

When Two Horses Are Harnessed Together, The Slower One Sets the Pace

By Robert Quillen

The biography of a great man usually contains an element of mystery. The man seems to travel too far and too fast for his motive power. His achievements indicate greater ability than he seems to possess.

The fault is the biographer's. He overlooked the woman in the case. In his bachelor days, Mencken was fond of gathering evidence to prove that genius never survives matrimony—that all great works were done by men who were free of feminine influence.

But wherever the work of man is conspicuously good, a careful search will reveal the presence of a woman in the background—with or without benefit of clergy.

There is no escaping woman's influence. If she is not present to help man with her virtues or hinder him with her faults, then her very absence is a factor that affects everything he does.

Observe the young widower, schooled to work in double harness. The harness may have chafed at times; but once he is free, he promptly marries again or as promptly goes to the devil.

Once chosen as a mate, a woman cannot be neutral. If she isn't making a fool of a man, she is making a man of a fool. Whether she likes it or not, she makes or breaks.

It is difficult to measure a man correctly, or understand him, without knowing something of his home life.

If he seems to have all of the equipment needed to win success, and yet fails or indifferently marks time as men do when their spirits are broken and hope is gone, there is neither kindness nor comradeship in his home, but only bickering and strife and endless complaining.

And if he is one who won't be whipped or even consider the possibility of self-improvement—he faces odds without fear, like one who has hidden and unlimited resources—his home at night to a comrade and friend whose kindness, loyalty, wisdom and courage make him a bigger and better man than he ever could be alone.

The secret of success is not found in copy books; it is led to the altar.

LEADS BY 46,000 VOTES; 3 MORE STATES HOLD ELECTIONS TUESDAY.

By Paul Mallon.

DALLAS, Texas, Aug. 26.—(P)—James V. Allred, who made opposition to "Fergusonism" the cue of his campaign, was the choice of Texas voters today to succeed Mrs. Miriam A. "Ma" Ferguson, in the governorship.

The democratic nomination—tantamount to election in Texas—was conceded the 35-year-old state attorney-general by Tom F. Hunter, supported by Mrs. Ferguson and her husband, James H. Ferguson, impeached former governor. Allred held a lead over Hunter of more than 46,000 votes from Saturday's runoff primary at the time Hunter announced he would concede.

Allred was called a "boy" in the campaign addresses of Ferguson, whose organization has held sway in Texas politics for 20 years. The attorney-general in answer said he was not too young to run for governor in his own name, and that's more than Jim Ferguson can do. Mrs. Ferguson was elected for two terms on a "vindictive" platform after her husband's impeachment.

Hunter, oil man and attorney of Wichita Falls—also Allred's home city—said he knew the principles for which I stood are right and I shall continue to fight for them. I am under obligation to no class or organization and I would rather not be governor than to contract such obligations. I refused to make any trades.

A Texas election bureau tabulation gave Allred 480,479 votes and Hunter 435,850.

Second Ferguson Setback. The runoff primary brought the second setback this year to the Ferguson organization. O. C. McDonald, whom the Fergusons sponsored in the first primary, ran third behind Allred and Hunter, neither of whom attained the majority that would have obliged the runoff.

Allred, 5 foot 10 state's attorney-general, known throughout Texas for the "General Allred grin," was a son of the World War.

In campaign speeches he referred to the Ferguson-Hunter "boy" opposition and said: "In 1918, I wasn't too young to enlist in the United States navy and serve my country while Mr. Hunter stayed at home and made his fortune out of oil, at $3.50 a barrel."

Hunter in turn accused Allred of republican leanings, but the attorney-general retorted he was the first Texas contributor to the Roosevelt-Garner victory fund in 1932. Allred said Hunter had set himself up as a "dream of power" as a state "dictator."

He described as "Huey Long-Hitlerism" the Hunter proposal to concentrate certain powers in the governor's cabinet.

Ferguson Outlasted in 1917. James E. Ferguson was impeached and removed from the governor's office in 1917. His wife, who ran on a vindictive ticket, now is completing her second term. He has announced they would retire from politics after the inauguration next January 7.

Texas 100 per cent democratic congressional delegation gained four members, while Representative W. D. McFarland, of Graham, apparently was re-elected over Sam B. Spence, of Wichita Falls.

Nat Patton, of Crockett, won the seventh district; George H. Mahon, of Colorado, in the 19th; Mary Maverick, of Abilene, in the 20th; and Charles L. South, of Coleman, in the 21st.

The last three are new districts gained by redistricting.

Other congressmen either were assured of nomination in the first primary, without the necessity of a runoff, or were unopposed.

3 MORE STATES TO HOLD PRIMARIES ON TUESDAY

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26.—(UP)—A socialist effort to oust California's anti-democratic governor from office headlines the political show tonight as voters in three states prepare for Tuesday primaries.

Missouri and South Carolina trail the west coast in political interest. In Sinclair, foremost political pamphleteer of the nation, set the California hustings a-fire with his democratic gubernatorial candidacy.

Senator Hiram Johnson, republican, California, a candidate for renomination in four primaries, believed for a time that he might be elected as a republican and second place to a socialist-incontestable evidence of a tendency in the United States toward a realignment of political parties.

Wardell Lead Democrats. George Creel, war-time director of public information, and Justus S. Wardell, California, led the democratic challenge to Sinclair's candidacy. Creel is running for independence of Senator William G. McAdoo's state organization.

Wardell seeks to regain control of California democracy. He lost it in 1932 when the state voted for the 1932 election for the presidential candidacy of John N. Garner.

A platoon of republicans, including Governor F. E. Merriam, former Governor C. C. Young and J. R. Quinn, former national commander of the American Legion, seeks republican nomination for governor. But Sinclair's threat, democrats are confident because the state registration and that in Los Angeles county—republican stronghold—is preponderantly democratic this year for the first time.

Johnson is a candidate on the ballots of the republican, democratic, commonwealth and progressive parties. He is a democratic candidate by invitation of the state organization.

Independent democrat, is running against Field in South Carolina.

South Carolina will vote on nomination for governor, state officers and members of the house of representatives Tuesday. But a numerous field of candidates for governor will throw the choice to a runoff primary scheduled for September 11.

Over-shadowing interest in the runoff is the liquor ballot in which voters will suggest what legislation shall be about legalizing, regulating and taxing the manufacture and sale of intoxicants. Southern legislators 32 beer and since repeal of the 18th amendment has been subject to a law permitting the thirsty to possess one quart of liquor each month. The state is expected to refuse further liberalization of the liquor law.

A three-cornered battle for senatorial nomination rages in Mississippi. Senator Herbert D. Stephens, representative Ross Collins and former Governor Theodore G. Bilbo seek preferment. Stephens and Collins have been angling unsuccessfully for White House aid. Bilbo—late $6,000 a year

Big Bethel's 69th Anniversary Marked by Brilliant Program

By RALPH MCGILL.

Big Bethel church, probably the best-known negro church in the south and one of the best known in the nation, Sunday celebrated its sixty-ninth anniversary with a brilliant program.

The regular morning service was a part of the program, with the sermon preached by Rev. W. A. Fountain, bishop of the sixth episcopal district of the A. M. E. church.

In the afternoon at 4:30 o'clock a special anniversary program was held, presided over by Rev. J. S. Flipper, bishop of the eleventh district.

A large portion of the magnificent audience was composed of white people who were, along with the members of the congregation, captivated by the charm and eloquence of Bishop Flipper.

"I was born in the south and I have seen Atlanta from the time Sherman burned it until today," he said. "And it is a good city. There is a better understanding between the races here than in any other city. I think the south is going to be, and is now, a paradise in which to live."

"If there is anything wrong, I am going to stay here and right it. There is a good relationship between the good white people and the good negroes. There never was and never will be a good understanding between the bad negroes and the bad white people."

Deeper Understanding.

"You people in the south understand us better than anyone else. You don't know us, he continued. "We have two opinions, our public and our private. You know one. You understand us and we appreciate that fact. One wouldn't bring the kitchen utensils into the parlor. And I would not talk about my own section of the country. I would stay there and try to right what is wrong. I am glad I am a southerner. I was born in the south. I am going to live in the south and die in the south, and I am going to enter Heaven by the southern gates," he concluded, smiling.

Success May Depend on Your Food!

How fast you go ahead in the world, how much money you make, depends very largely on how wise you are about your choice of food.

If you are tired out by 11:30, if you're dull after lunch, if hot weather gets you, it's probably because you just haven't learned to eat the right things.

It's very simple, too. Try eating one meal a day of Shredded Wheat, milk, and fruit. This happy combination will make almost any one more alert, full of pep, and efficient. It gives your body, in concentrated, easily digested and delicious form, what it needs for nourishment, tissue building, resistance to disease, and it contains bran to keep you regular.

COTTON STRIKE SET FOR SEPT. 4

Green, of the American Federation of Labor, Gorman wrote:

The general strike committee of the United Textile Workers, which agreed upon a date for a nationwide stoppage of work in cotton textile mills and strike orders having been sent to all local unions, subject to release, it seems advisable to report to you for your information in some detail the conditions obtaining in the cotton textile industry.

"Cotton textile workers are, in the main, in a worse position than they were before NRA, except that they now have some prospect for finally remedying their condition under the protection of Section 7-A."

He added other details which he said showed the necessity for a strike.

Intervention Seen.

Meanwhile, prospects of intervention by the national labor relations board, headed by Lloyd Garrison, increased.

Friday, Gorman told Robert W. Byrnes, chairman of the cotton textile industrial relations board, that "our experience in the operation of the board gives us no confidence in its ability to adjust the issues now at stake in fairness to labor." He indicated he would prefer to submit the union's case to the national labor board, and three hours later was closeted with Garrison.

A second conference was held last night and union leaders were called out early today for another session with labor board members.

Gorman declined to divulge the outcome of the conferences but indicated the strike committee had not closed the door upon negotiations with Garrison. He emphasized, however, that the strike would be held as scheduled, regardless of any negotiations, unless labor's demands were met.

The union's grievances have been listed officially as:

"The stretch-out system has been so widely thronged throughout the industry as to constitute a sweeping and inhuman method of operation from which there must be relief."

The volume of employment has declined steadily since immediately after the cotton textile code went into effect.

"Average weekly earnings have declined under the code."

"There has been a sweeping and intolerable practice of discharging workers for union affiliation in clear violation of Section 7-A of the industrial recovery act."

The union's statements are in sharp conflict with the claims by industry that the code has brought higher pay rolls under the cotton textile code.

In pushing plans for the general strike, the union leaders had a pledge of "full support" from President Green, of the A. F. of L.

The federation is assigning trained organizers to assist U. To assist U. field workers. Wednesday night Green will make a nationwide radio address on behalf of the mill workers.

ALUMINUM STRIKE LEADERS ON WAY TO PEACE PARLEY

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 26.—(AP)—Warring leaders in the aluminum workers' council and executives of the Aluminum Company of America tonight headed for Washington and a peace parley.

They were summoned to the nation's capital to meet tomorrow with the high court of peace for industry, and representatives of the federal department of labor.

This is the first formal attempt by the board to bring the opposing parties together. Company and union heads withheld comment but there was optimism in some circles that the negotiations might speed a settlement of the walkout which is now entering its third week.

Approximately 8,500 workers in six of the company's plants are on strike, demanding a universal wage rate, the checkoff of union dues and formal agreements between the company and the union.

naping law to punish his assailants. O'Dell charged that Hardin county officers will not permit him to file state charges, and told reporters that J. M. Rior, American Federation of Labor organizer, will go to Toledo, Ohio, tomorrow to prefer kidnapping charges in federal court against some of his 200 assailants.

Sheriff Mitchell asserted there was no truth in O'Dell's charges. "I do not know who was in the crowd," he said, "and neither does the prosecutor."

The sheriff further said O'Dell would not be denied the right to ask a warrant in any justice of the peace court in Hardin county.

O'Dell's announcement came as quiet returned to this village of 700 persons following a day and night of tension. After the home of Mayor Godfrey J. Ott was bombed, O'Dell was arrested for questioning. He then was taken from sheriff's deputies and driven 14 miles from town, kicked and beaten. Despite a warning not to return, O'Dell hatched his way back and asserted, "I will kill the first man who tries to get me." O'Dell disclaimed any knowledge of the circumstances surrounding the bombing.

The strike committee had a prepared for a threatened return of the crowd that ordered their leader to leave town last night. A threatened second installation failed to materialize and O'Dell, from his bed, said he was prepared to go into court and identify at least 20 of his captors.

Frank A. Small, former well-known Atlanta newspaperman and brother of the late Dr. Sam W. Small, associate editor of The Constitution, was in Atlanta Sunday en route to his home in Florida.

He was for many years press agent for Colonel W. F. (Buffalo Bill) Cody, and traveled in every state of the Union and in Europe. Previously he was editor of the Sunday Record here, in 1884, and was a reporter on the Evening Post, in Atlanta, in 1881. It was the first time he had visited the city in many years and he was astonished at its growth. Mr. Small is a brother of Mrs. W. J. Speer, of Atlanta.

As a detective, he's rated as a top-notch. Usually, he gets his man, and more important, gets sufficient evidence to convict.

Though his record is one with which any conscientious detective would be pleased, Detective McCrary Sunday night had his doubts about his prowess as a man-catcher and a property-recoverer.

Detective McCrary's shiny, new Ford V-8 was stolen Saturday night out from under his nose. He had parked the car on Spring street near Simpson street while he went into a store. In the car was his coat, the Police Still Seeking Co-Ed Murder Knife

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Aug. 26.—(AP)—Undaunted by previous fruitless efforts, officers investigating the slaying of Faye New, Howard College coed, today again undertook a minute search of the area surrounding the spot where the girl was slain in the hope that new clues might be found.

Their work was speeded by the knowledge that the grand jury called in special session to investigate the crime will meet tomorrow at 10 a. m., and is expected to complete its work in not more than two days.

Rumors, persistent but unconfirmed, continued to tell of a missing witness who, if found, would furnish important testimony in the case. One of those directing the investigation said a witness was being sought, but admitted that thus far the search had been unavailing.

Harold Taylor, in county jail charged with the murder under a warrant sworn out by the police department, denies the crime and has stated since he was taken into custody for questioning he did not have a knife when he and Miss New started the automobile ride which ended in her death.

HOLC Regional Office To Open Here Sept. 1

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26.—(AP)—The Home Owners' Loan Corporation announced today its Atlanta regional office will be opened about September 1, to handle loans to distressed home owners in Georgia, Florida, Alabama and North and South Carolina.

Hugh B. Flece will serve as regional manager in charge at Atlanta. The announcement was in line with the corporation's decentralization policy through which it hopes to stimulate greater administrative efficiency.

This regional office will be in direct charge of collection of interest and principal due on loans made to home owners by the corporation, and will likewise handle routine correspondence from the state and district managers in the five states.

Present plans, the announcement said, were to establish the regional quarters in the John Silvey building.

Caroline Miller's Novel Praised In Phelps' Annual Book Lecture

POINT AUX BARQUES, Mich., Aug. 26.—(AP)—William Lyon Phelps, professor emeritus of Yale University, said in his annual book lecture tonight that 1934 has been notable for the number of important American novels published.

The distinguished literary scholar mentioned particularly "So Red the Rose," "Lamb in His Bosom," "Once a Wilderness" and "Years Are So Long."

The first novel he called "a work of literary art," describing it as "a sympathetic and subtle representation of aristocratic southern life before and during the Civil War."

He said "Lamb in His Bosom," which won the Pulitzer prize, "deserves it, though apparently the first book by its author, Caroline Miller."

"The year 1934 has been notable for the considerable number of important American novels," he declared. "It is the chief feature of contemporary production. These novels for the most part interpret American life and the social history of various parts of our country. They are American novels of American life by American authors."

He discussed 34 books, including 11 novels, 11 of general literature, four of poems, and eight thrillers.

The list of books follows:

Novels.

"So Red the Rose," by Stark Young; "Lamb in His Bosom," by Caroline Miller; "Once a Wilderness," by Arthur Pound; "Years Are So Long," by Josephine Lawrence;

"American Song," by Paul Engle; "Carlyle in Old Age," by D. A. Wilson and D. W. MacArthur; "Between Two Worlds," by Nicholas Murray Butler; "The Provincial Lady in America," by E. M. Delaford; "A Backward Glance," by Edith Wharton; "Alice James," edited by A. R. Burr; "Queen Elizabeth," by J. E. Neale; "George Washington Himself," by John C. Fitzpatrick; "Geoffrey Chaucer," by J. ANN STEPS OUT

By MARGARET GORMAN NICHOLS

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE: Nick Hamill, younger brother of her employer, John Hamill, head of Hamill & Harrison, advertising agency, finds her. As he is bored too, Nick asks her to go to meet his friends at a hotel downtown. She goes and has a good time. All go to Nick's bachelor apartment for breakfast and he drives her home. Later Doug sulks and warns her against Nick. Now go on with the story.

INSTALLMENT III.

"I brought these," he said and gave her the corsage of faded gardenias he had sent her and she had left purposely at the Reynolds home.

She put them in a vase on the table.

"I'm sorry," he said, "about last night. Excitement of getting home and seeing every one. You must have had a rotten time with me." He turned to her. "I don't blame you for running out on me. It was your running off with Nick Hamill that got me."

"What's wrong with him?" she asked.

"Oh, he's rich and important and invited everywhere," said Doug and shrugged, "but he's notorious. He isn't good company. I can't bear to think of your getting mixed up with a man like that."

"I'm not mixed up with him. But I like him."

He got up and walked to the end of the room and came back again. Ann never had seen him so disturbed. He sat beside her and took her hand. "I guess I want to have my cake and eat it, too. You know, Ann, I've been in love with you for a long time. I want to marry you, but I'm afraid to ask you. I'm afraid I can't be faithful. I know you can't be faithful of myself."

"I'm glad you told me. You mean—"

"Not only her," he said seriously. "I see. Two years ago you asked me to wait for you and not to go out with other men. I've been faithful to you—as faithful as I was married."

"I want you still to be faithful even though I haven't kept my promise."

Ann withdrew her hands from his. It was strange that last night had revealed so many things so clearly, things that before had been horribly confused.

"I understand," she said, "but I can't. You expect me to wait until you are ready to settle down and then you'll probably marry somebody else. And I'll be left out entirely. I can't do it, Doug."

"You were never like this before," he said, suddenly angry. "Nick Hamill changed your mind about me last night."

"Nick! He had nothing to do with it."

He got up and went toward the door. "All right. Have this your way. I'm not throwing you over."

He went out.

A JUNGLE ADVENTURE.

VI—Allen Goes Fishing.

(The Story So Far: Allen Thompson, a sturdy youth not quite 16 years old, has gone into the jungles of Brazil with a party of scientists after an interesting journey, the party has reached a village of the Kalapalo Indians.)

Allen kept his eyes wide open after reaching the Kalapalo village. He found that it was made up of 15 large huts, each large enough to hold from 20 to 30 persons. The huts were dome-shaped, and were thatched with palm leaves.

great deal. One of the boys took hold of Allen's right arm and rubbed it to see whether there was white paint which would rub off.

Later the boys led Allen to a hut where there was a tame monkey. It was of small size but had a rather long tail, and could use its tail to cling to limbs of trees. The animal was not kept in a cage. It was allowed to run out of the hut when it wanted to do so. Sometimes it would go into the jungle and stay for an hour or more, but sooner or later it would come back, for it knew that it would be fed.

There were other "pets" in the village—two peacocks and half a dozen parrots. The peacocks, as Allen learned, were piglike animals which slept a great deal during the daytime but were wide awake at night. Like the parrots and the monkey, they were allowed freedom; but they stayed around the village because they knew they would be fed by the Indians.

Allen showed the boys his flashlight, a great wonder to them. They were also interested in watching the scientists taking moving pictures of life in the village.

One early morning Allen strolled to the river bank alone, and noticed that his fishing pole was still in one of the caves or holes. It was in sections and was tied in a little bundle. "Why not go fishing?" he asked himself. "Maybe I could catch one of those piranhas I've heard about. They say that piranhas are 'man-eaters' but they're only a foot or two long, and I guess they wouldn't do much harm if I caught on a hook."

Stiffing action to the thought, Allen went forth to fish. Within an hour he managed to catch several fish, but miraculously he had drilled for some distance with the current, but in the hope of catching one of the fierce little fish, he decided to paddle farther downstream.

"The huts are all roof!" he exclaimed to Mr. Rudway.

"Yes," replied the young scientist, "the roof reaches clear down to the ground. The hatch is placed over a framework of tree branches."

Allen observed that the Indians had skin of dark brown color, but some of the men had painted their bodies. Bright red was a favorite color used for this purpose.

The women and children let their hair grow long. They, as well as the men, looked with great interest upon the white visitors. On the second day of the visit, two of the Indian boys made friends with Allen. They could not exchange words with him, but they used signs; and this helped a

Friendly Counsel

By CAROLINE CHATFIELD.

Dear Miss Chatfield: Since I entered business I have had my hands full looking after my mother, my brother's widow and her children. There has been no time in which I could consider my personal happiness or even make friends among the fair sex. My sister-in-law has decided to get married and the man is well-to-do, so I will be relieved of my support. My first thought is to find a wife and to have a family of my own. My mother will have to live with me. She always has and she always will. Please describe the sort of a girl or woman who will make a good wife. I can give her a good home, a comfortable living and can promise her that my mother will treat her like a daughter.

FORTY.

Answer: There are several reasons why a school teacher or a business woman in her thirties will make the most suitable wife for a bachelor of 40 whose mother lives with him, preferably a woman who hasn't enjoyed the comforts and pleasures, the freedom and the privacy of her own home. Living in a rented room, taking her meals at drug store counters and boarding houses, or eating lunch from a box, has brought her to a full realization of what it means to a woman to have a home. She thinks of home life as a sort of paradise into which only the most fortunate of her sisters have been admitted. For the ticket into paradise which marriage to a man owning his home will give her, she is ready to pay with a life of devotion. She won't be apt to fight for the privilege of running that home or to be resentful at the presence of her husband's mother in it.

She knows the value of a dollar as only those who have earned it can know. A comfortable living means to her what costly motor cars and rare jewels mean to the woman who has lived on the bounty of well-to-do parents and known luxury without work. She is inured to hardship, accustomed to privation, acquainted with economies. Life has been a struggle to provide herself with necessities. Luxuries have been for others, not for her. She has little time for considering her personal happiness and little opportunity for making friends among the opposite sex.

She hasn't lost the enthusiasm of youth nor the zest for life. She still dreams of having a husband, a home and children of her own, but she knows that to find one, rich, good looking, distinguished and successful, is as hard as to find a needle in a haystack. She has learned to evaluate life and to regard a man for what he is rather than for what he has. The ideal man of her dreams doesn't come along and she is quite ready to compromise and accept a man for what one who has character even if he hasn't other qualities she once counted essential. She is in a mood to trade and she isn't going to drive a hard bargain. She has learned life's hard and most necessary lesson—self-control. She couldn't have held her job in schoolroom or in office if she had not. No flying into fits of temper when things don't go to suit her. She has been trained in a hard school and she knows her lessons by heart.

She is not a paragon of virtue. She is one with her sisters under the skin. She will get her feelings hurt when she imagines herself slighted, tucked her head in her pillow and weep when she has a misunderstanding with her husband, feel the gnawing pangs of jealousy when mother-in-law or sister-in-law appears to have the right of way with him, experience moods of despondency when she thinks about having signed away her independence, given up her means of livelihood and placed herself in a dependent position. She will think wistfully of the days when she did as she pleased, went where she pleased and spent her money without reference to a mere man.

She will be as all other wives; at times, trying to get her husband's attention, hard to please, hard to understand. She will be foolishly insisting that her birthdays and anniversaries be remembered, anxious to have her husband to herself, eager to take a trip with him occasionally without the chaperone of his mother. All in all she will be more reasonable than the average, more self-contained, more

PILOT AND PASSENGER DIE IN PLANE CRASH

GOLD FLICKERS IN DINNER DRESS.

A metal threaded crepe dress like this is essentially smart in the life of college girls and debutantes. There are so many occasions to wear it.

It's a youthfully flattering type, too, and the easiest thing in the world to make it.

Another interesting scheme for it is wine red crepe silk with wine red and gold checked collar and cuffs and gold buttons.

Black velvet is very soft and pretty too, with the collar, cuffs and girdle of silver, with rhinestone buttons.

Style No. 613 is designed for sizes 14, 16, 18 years, 36, 38 and 40 inches bust.

Size 16 requires 6 yards of 30-inch material and 2 1/2 yards of 3 1/2-inch ribbon for sash.

A Violet Hand Lotion That Is Like Crushed Blossoms

By MIGNON.

The label may tell you to do one thing with the contents of an attractive bottle, and then I may tell you to do another. The answer is that you can mix with something else. It is violet or nothing.

There is no disposition on my part to exaggerate. But if you don't like the violet lotion either for face or hands I'll remain open-minded and if you never have had a yen for violet, I'll confess it's something you lack of interest. But "breathes there a woman with soul so dead" that she can't like a little violet perfume that pours out its fragrance in the hope that some one will be pleased?

I have no interest in either the lotion, or in violets. In fact, when I was told that violet perfume of toilet water was for "older women" I decided to stand aloof in self-defense. But this one broke me down, and I confess it's something you haven't the effrontery to ignore.

If you want to know where you can purchase any article mentioned in this column, please do not write unless you live outside the city, in which case enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

(Copyright, 1934, for The Constitution.)

I stopped writing a minute to put some on my hands. Without any prejudice whatever, I say that of all the violet concoctions I have smelled (my long life this is the most natural I may have missed some).

All I say is that I wish you would go and buy yourself a bottle of this lotion that is labeled for the face and use it preferably on the hands (face, too, if you like) and then tell me if you don't have a haunting fragrance about you for hours afterward that your friends remark about with enthusiasm.

My idea of luxury is to have a nice warm bath and then use this lotion for an after-bath rub. What a rich feeling! And yet it is not expensive. I'm going to do it and the cost will mean nothing in the face of that fragrance. If you can feel like the owner of the United States mint at a small cost, why not do it?

The fresh violets you buy are nearly perfect, but what you want is to recapture the memory of the flowers you picked in your early days when wood violets were a thrill to you and when the scent of the flowers was mixed with the most delicate of perfumes that came from the damp woods. Don't make the mistake of trying to blend the hand lotion with some other perfume. It doesn't make any difference what it is, if it is not

Culbertson on Contract

By ELY CULBERTSON.

World's Champion Bridge and Greatest Card Analyst.

The Decoy Double.

George Bernard Shaw in one of his plays represents Julius Caesar, when a lieutenant wished to tell him something that must not be overheard, as opening all the doors and windows so that no one would think of listening. Though I am not convinced that this method would work in all cases, nobody can deny that Caesar had the right idea in trying to anticipate the mental processes of those he wished to outwit.

In bridge, as in other branches of warfare, one is concerned with this problem of psychological anticipation. The declarer, perhaps, will try to guess right in what manner his guess, unless he is one of those bridge morons who just guess, will be based on inferences drawn from the bidding. How can you make his guess wrong?

In the following hand the West player accomplished the desired result by throwing in a decoy double:

East-West vulnerable.

♠ K 10 7 5
 ♥ K 3
 ♦ 8 5 4
 ♣ A 10 5 4
 ♥ Q 3 7 6
 ♦ J 10 7
 ♣ J 7 2
 ♠ A 9 6 2
 ♥ J 10 5
 ♦ A K
 ♣ Q 9 3

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1♠	Pass	2♠	Pass
2♠	Pass	4♠	Pass
Pass	4♠	Pass	Pass

The bidding is most illuminating. North's single raise on the first round indicates a maximum holding of 4-1-2 playing tricks, with probably no outside biddable suit and thus fairly balanced distribution. South was unable to bid game immediately and consequently has not a very strong hand. The contract therefore must depend upon the success of one or two finessees. If West, with his very weak hand, can cause South to place the outstanding strength with him, whatever finesse there are will be taken toward East and one or two tricks may be gained, sufficient to defeat the contract.

To see how West's strategy worked, consider how South, trusting the inferences of the double, planned his play. The diamond queen was opened and won by the king. Now South, with balanced distribution, would ordinarily have played for the drop in spades. But it seemed that West must have held at least the promise of a trump trick in order to double, so South first played the spade ace and then finessed for the queen to dummy's K-10. Even when East gobbled up this trick with his queen, South still had good grounds for believing in the double.

South then led the heart A-Q, the club K-J and the sequence in diamonds which had already been shown by the opening lead. West might have made a gambling double because the bidding sounded uncertain. South therefore did not take a finesse for the queen of hearts by leading the jack and playing low from dummy; instead he put the dummy's heart king when West played low on the first lead of that suit; and East captured the king with his ace, returning a heart for West to win with the queen. South had now lost three tricks, two of them having been sacrificed through his belief in West's double. A club trick which South could have taken to East's king set the contract.

TOMORROW'S HAND.

Suspect in Burglary Caught After Chase

Awakened by a noise in his bedroom shortly before midnight Saturday, Samuel Frough, of 15 Fulton street, saw a negro bending over his bed attempting to get the rings off his sleeping wife's fingers. Frough told police that he leaped out of bed, got a revolver and sent several shots after the fleeing negro and then gave chase.

Patrolman George W. Slate, who was on his way to report for duty, heard the shots and saw a negro running. He stopped the negro and held him. While he was questioning the negro, who gave his name as Eugene Kellan, Frough, attired in his pajamas and still holding on to the revolver, arrived. He identified Kellan as the negro he saw in the light of his bedroom a few minutes earlier and Kellan was being held on "suspicion."

Clouds and Showers Forecast for Today

The mercury's 71 and 86 degrees. Light afternoon showers are very probable for the city this afternoon and the sky will be cloudy most of the day.

RALLIES PLANNED IN COUNTY RACES

Most City Candidates To 'Rest' Tonight; East Point To Hear Millican.

City candidates for the most part will "rest" tonight while aspirants for Fulton county posts in the Georgia assembly and contenders for the nomination as judge of Fulton superior court battle it out in a series of rallies.

Alderman G. Everett Millican, seeking the 35th state senatorial nomination in opposition to Walter A. Sims, incumbent, will hold a rally tonight at 7:45 o'clock tonight at the East Point auditorium. There will be music and all county candidates have been invited.

J. V. Poole, opposing Judge Humphries, and friends of the judge will hold meetings tonight. Poole will hold a rally at the Masonic club, Buckhead, beginning at 8 o'clock, and supporters of Judge Humphries will form a thirteenth ward Humphries for Judge club at the home of Oliver Dolvin, real estate operator, at his home, 791 Virginia avenue.

Roy LeCraw, majority candidate, will make a talk tonight as a feature of a meeting of Battery B Association, with which he served during the World War. The meeting will be at the Chamber of Commerce building.

County candidates have only about 17 more days in which to campaign but the seeking city offices have until September 26. Mayor James L. Key's headquarters announced Saturday he will not schedule any further political rallies until after the September 12 state primary.

Alderman J. Charlie Murphy, third entrant for the majority nomination, has scheduled a meeting at 7:30 o'clock Tuesday night at the Georgia Avenue school.

LT. JONES IS NAMED ADJUTANT OF LEGION

Lieutenant Stanley Jones, United States navy, in charge of recruiting in Georgia and Alabama, Sunday was elected department adjutant of the American Legion at a meeting of the executive board here. Lieutenant Jones lives at Macon, but department headquarters will be maintained in Atlanta for the present at least, it was announced.

There were six applicants for the position of department adjutant. The executive committee heard each of them and then in executive session elected Jones on the first ballot. Lieutenant Jones enlisted in the United States navy at the age of 17 and worked his way up through the ranks. He will be retired as an officer in 1936. During the World War he served on the board of officers that conveyed troops to France. He has served as adjutant of the Macon post of the Legion and as district commander of the sixth Legion district.

Lieutenant Jones succeeds Captain W. A. Sirmon, who has been department adjutant for three years and has been in the service since 1914. Sirmon resigned to become Georgia manager of the federal housing board.

Miss Margaret Giles, a member of the Legion, having served as yeoman during the war, will be continued as secretary to the adjutant and will have charge of the Atlanta headquarters.

State Commander Sidney Camp presided at the meeting here Sunday.

All Atlanta Unions To March in Parade

All the unions affiliated with the Atlanta Federation of Trades will participate in the Labor Day parade a week from today, it was announced Sunday, following a meeting of union representatives at the Labor temple.

Plans are being made to gather the greatest Labor Day crowd in Atlanta's history and approximately 25,000 persons are expected to be in the line of march. Complete details of the line of march will be announced this week by William Strauss, marshal of the parade, and A. Steve Nance, president of the federation of trades union.

Miss Allie B. Mann, president of the Georgia Education Association and a leader in educational circles in Atlanta, will be labor's speaker next Sunday night at the annual convention of churches at the state capitol. The joint meeting of the Central Presbyterian, Central Baptist, Trinity Methodist and the Lutheran Church of the Redeemer will be held on the capitol lawn and will begin at 7:30 o'clock.

Woman Found Dead In Apartment Here

Mrs. Thomas W. Ragland, 41, was found dead in bed at her apartment at 330 Forrest avenue Sunday morning. An inquest to determine the cause of death will be held this morning.

Miss Helen Morris, of 856 Cherokee, told police she was with Mrs. Ragland until a late hour Saturday night and that Mrs. Ragland was asleep when she left for her home. Neighbors, summoned by Mrs. Ragland's maid, found her dead at the door Sunday morning, forced entrance to the apartment and discovered Mrs. Ragland dead in her bed.

Surviving are her husband, a daughter, Mrs. L. M. House, of Atlanta, and her stepfather, C. B. Johnson, of Atlanta. Funeral arrangements will be announced by H. M. Patterson & Son.

Posse Hunts Negro For Double Slaying

CHARLESTON, Mo., Aug. 26.—(AP)—Police and incensed residents organized a widespread search today for a transient negro, following the fatal shooting of Jess and Dan Cofer, white overmen, on the Tyeonore plantation at Wolf island, 25 miles southeast of here.

The two white men were shot to death as they watched a negro dance which was in progress at the home of a negro tenant on the plantation, a brother of Mose Hurley, accused by witnesses of the slayings. Hurley and his brother fled after the shooting.

Officers learned it climaxed a quarrel between the two white men and Hurley. Four negroes were held in the county jail here as material witnesses for the coroner's inquest tomorrow.

NANCY PAGE

Bananes Flambees Are Flaming Bananas.

By FLORENCE La GANKE.

Lois wanted to see something different for dessert at a swanky luncheon she was giving.

She called Nancy, who gave her three different suggestions.

"The first one, Lois, is delicious when you can get fresh red raspberries. Now that they come back into the market in the early fall I am suggesting this one. Pick over the berries. Have them well chilled. Serve them with a dressing made of equal parts of vanilla ice cream and raspberry ice beaten together and made into a mushy mixture which is almost heavenly in flavor."

The second recipe calls for small balls of ice cream, watermelon and cantaloupe flavored with sparkling white grape juice and be sprinkled with finely chopped mint.

But I wonder whether the French dish—I'll spell it for you—the French way—"Bananes Flambees" is not your happiest choice.

Select ripe bananas. Peel and cut into halves lengthwise. Place in a baking dish, preferably the French plate which is of white pottery glazed on the inside and brown pottery on the outside. Sprinkle a bit of lemon juice and sugar over the bananas and let them bake until partially soft.

Now place under the broiler flame for just an instant. Then have wedges of fresh bread and ready to put on the dish. Allow two pieces of orange per person. Take the dish to the table, pour some brandy over it or some rum and set fire to the liquid. As it blazes it finishes the browning of the banana and extracts a little of the orange essence. Eat the bananas as soon as the flame has died down. You try that on your guests and see whether they are not enthusiastic."

Nancy's new leaflet on ways of using fruit may prove full of ideas for you. Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope and get your copy. Write Nancy Page, care of The Atlanta Constitution.

OPHISAURUS.

The dear old glass snake, which has been the source of many legends about snakes and such in the southern folklore, comes to light in this series of articles for one purpose. I want to show you how the name snake for this lizard has even carried over into scientific terminology. Examine his name, heading this column in gold, and you will find, meaning snake, has been cleverly combined with saurus, meaning lizard, to give them impression that the gentleman responsible for the name wished to avoid the responsibility for placing it in one group or the other and indicated an intermediate position for the species. This is not the case. This name was given it by Daudin in 1803. Daudin, he it remembered, was one of the best comparative morphologists of his day. Believe me, if any one can give a name to an animal, meaning snake, has been cleverly combined with saurus, meaning lizard, to give them impression that the gentleman responsible for the name wished to avoid the responsibility for placing it in one group or the other and indicated an intermediate position for the species. ROUND TABLE OF BUSINESS

A General Weekly Review of Commerce and Industry Affecting the Greater Atlanta Trade Territory. Edited by JACK TUBBS

Commodious Used Car Sales and Show Room Opened by Ernest G. Beaudry

COMPANY REPORTS BEST SALES GAINS FOR 1934 TO DATE

Atlanta's First Ford Dealer Offers Complete Service Department, Staffed by Skilled Men.

Ever eager to maintain a high standard of service, and to provide facilities consistent with this policy, Ernest G. Beaudry, Atlanta Ford dealer, 169 Marietta street, N. W., announces the opening of new and commodious sales and showrooms at 176-78 Marietta street, directly across the street from his company's main showrooms and service plant.

This action, Mr. Beaudry states, has been made possible to a large extent by the steady business gains his company has made in recent months, reflecting the increasing popularity of Beaudry service.

Ford owners and prospective Ford buyers will find adequate proof of the wisdom and excellence of their choice, as reflected by popular approval, in sales volume figures announced for the Ernest G. Beaudry organization for the year to date. Business thus far in 1934, Mr. Beaudry declares, has been by far the best of any year in the company's history, totaling approximately three-quarters of a million dollars, as compared with approximately $450,000 for the entire period of 1933.

Even though August is usually the slowest month of the year for automobile sales, he states, business this month has held up wonderfully, not only in new but in the used car department.

"We celebrated our company's eighteenth anniversary," says Mr. Beaudry, "on August 1. During these years the Ernest G. Beaudry organization has enjoyed consistent success and popularity, and has made and maintained thousands of customer-friendships of which we are proud."

The opening of the Beaudry used car sales and show room, embracing 15,000 square feet of floor space, now gives Ernest G. Beaudry a total of 25,000 square feet of floor space devoted entirely to the sale of new Ford cars and to the servicing and sale of Beaudry conditioned used cars.

The company, which had but a handful of employees when first opened, now employs approximately 90 persons in all its departments. In this connection, Mr. Beaudry points with pride to his service department, manned by Ford factory-trained mechanics, in which an average of more than 75 repair jobs are handled daily. Modern machinery, designed and recommended by Ford engineers, makes speedy, accurate and efficient repair work the rule. This shop is equipped to handle any type of repair, replacement or adjustment work.

The company maintains a general repair shop entirely separate from and in addition to a similar shop exclusively for the reconditioning of used cars.

Mr. Beaudry, who was Atlanta's first Ford dealer, organized his business here in 1916, having served two years prior to that time as manager of the Ford branch here.

Atlanta Envelope Company Products Defeat Southern Climate Troubles

Hot weather causes many different complaints, one of which, not at all infrequent, has to do with envelopes, according to S. Guthman, president of the Atlanta Envelope Company, one of the south's pioneer envelope makers, 506 Stewart avenue, S. W.

"Some business establishments," says Mr. Guthman, "experience difficulty in getting the flaps of their envelopes to stick fast. The trouble is that the proper kind of gum is not used in the manufacture of the offending envelopes."

"You realize, of course, that the peculiar climatic conditions of the south make it advisable to use products that have been especially designed for use in Dixie. That is true of paints and fences and other products, and it certainly is true of envelopes. Years ago, at our envelope plant on Stewart avenue, we succeeded in perfecting a special gum that just refuses to dry up on envelopes, but instead retains all of its sticking qualities, and thus eliminates any difficulty in getting envelope flaps to stick quickly and securely."

The Atlanta city directory does not list the Atlanta Envelope Company under the classification of "inventors," yet it is a fact that this company is responsible for many innovations in envelope design and manufacture.

W. LAW. INGLIS NAMED CHAIRMAN OF MOVERS' BODY

Cathcart Allied Storage Co. Executive Says Trend Is Away From Sept. 1 as Moving Date.

W. Law. Inglis, president of the Cathcart Allied Storage Company, 134 Houston street, N. E., recently was elected chairman of the Sixth Regional Board for the Household Goods, Moving and Storage Trade, at its organization meeting held in Birmingham.

The board's jurisdiction covers the states of Georgia, South Carolina, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi and the city of New Orleans.

Other officers named are T. F. Cathcart, of Atlanta, vice chairman; John J. Woodside, of Atlanta, secretary and treasurer, and Mrs. Lorena Coop, also of Atlanta, executive secretary.

Mr. Inglis, commenting upon the board's meeting and upon general business conditions among the household goods, moving and storage trades, cited particularly the trend among householders, more in evidence this year than ever before, toward departure from the traditional September 1 moving date. Householders, he asserted, are learning the desirability of moving ahead of September 1 in order to avail themselves of the wider choice of new places of residence.

This tendency, he stated, has resulted also in relieving a great deal of the rush hitherto imposed upon the power and gas companies, the telephone company and the city water department. It also has resulted, he stated, in easing the burden which heretofore has taxed the facilities of moving and storage companies.

The Cathcart Allied Storage Company, Mr. Inglis stated, is equipped and prepared to handle moving problems for the householder quickly, efficiently and with the utmost of care for the goods entrusted to its hands. The public is invited to visit and inspect the Cathcart Allied Storage Company's huge warehouse on Houston street and to discuss with Mr. Inglis and his associates any problem of moving, storage, packing or mothproofing.

Georgia Roofing Supply Company Reports Flintkote Rexlox Shingles Widely Popular

Rexlox shingles, manufactured by the Flintkote Company, of New Orleans, are shown here being applied to a home at 184 Howard street, owned by J. A. Nisbet, by reroofing experts of the Georgia Roofing Supply Company. Rexlox shingles are especially designed for application over old roofing. The main roof, as shown here, has been covered with Rexlox, and the porch roof still shows the old and worn roofing.

Rexlox shingles, manufactured by the Flintkote Company, for whose roofing products the Georgia Roofing Supply Company, 32 Mangum street, N. W., is distributor, are winning unprecedented popularity with home and building owners, it was revealed Saturday in an interview with F. M. Pelet, of the latter organization, and D. A. Lockwood, representative of the manufacturers.

Messrs. Pelet and Lockwood, discussing the present-day roofing problems, the operations of the roofing department of the Georgia Roofing Supply Company and especially the adaptability of Rexlox shingles, described in detail the Rexlox design and use. Built especially for use in recovering worn roofs, Rexlox shingles are designed to fasten with a special rust-resisting T-shaped nail and lock downhousing act in the complete insulation so securely that no wind short of hurricane force could blow them off.

The entire line of the Flintkote Company, which maintains a large plant at New Orleans, is distributed by the Georgia Roofing Supply Company. It also includes Setab shingles, rolled roofings, asphalt emulsions and various types of composition shingles.

The company maintains a very large sales and application department, and is in position to give immediate attention to any job, large or small.

Affiliated with the Georgia Roofing Supply Company is the Home Insulation Company of Georgia, which also is co-operating with the national
